

Student Employment

FACTS & FIGURES 2017-2018

Students at Texas A&M University can be employed in an assistantship position, through the Federal or Texas College Work Study programs, or by earning wages through part-time on campus employment. Assistantships are typically teaching or research.

Students earn work study or wages at various places of employment across campus. Work study can also be earned through certain off-campus entities through the Community Service Work Study Program. The Student Employment Office also provides students with employment resources and professional development opportunities.
